

POULTRY SHOW NEXT MONTH

Large Cash Premiums Offered at the Event After Farmers' Week.

"The Boone County Poultry Show will offer the largest amount of cash premiums of any one in the state, except the state show itself," says Miss Elizabeth Hodge, secretary of the local association. "The indications are that the show to be held the second week in January will be the best ever held here."

Special efforts will be made to get the boys and girls of Boone County to make exhibits at the show. At the last show arrangements were made for the distribution of several dozen eggs among children who were interested in poultry breeding. It is expected that fowls raised from these eggs will be exhibited. R. H. Emerson of the agricultural extension service will do special work among the Boone County Children before the show.

Although the coming show will not have the added attraction of Farmers' Week, it is expected that local interest will be much greater because of the show following Farmers' Week. If the show proves successful without being held during Farmers' Week, it is planned to hold the next one in December instead of January, according to Hugh Baker, president of the Association.

The catalogue is now in the hands of the printer and will be ready for distribution within a few days. Miss Hodge urges everyone who is interested in the show to write for one.

Part of the building of James & Dinwiddie, implement dealers, on South Eighth street, has been obtained for the show. This building is just north of the Dorn-Cloney Laundry Company, and the part to be used for the show is 75 by 35 feet. In case the entries should be larger than are expected, James & Dinwiddie have consented to give still more room for the show.

WOULD INCREASE MOTOR POWER

Columbia Inventor, J. O. Tow, Has Idea to Utilize the Heat.

If the invention of a Columbia youth turns out to be as practical as it appears in theory, the name of J. O. Tow, 207 South Ninth street, may be connected with a significant improvement in motor manufacturing. Tow has been working for the last month on a series of improvements which he conservatively claims will increase the efficiency of a motor 50 per cent.

"The loss of efficiency is in heat," Tow said, in discussing his plans. "By an asbestos jacket for the cylinder and by an arrangement to convert the present high temperature and low pressure into high pressure and low temperature, I expect to double the efficiency and power of an engine."

Tow has been successful in inventing several appliances. He is at work now on a model for his internal combustion engine. There will be no radical change. He is seeking to eliminate smoke and carbon deposits, to produce a more flexible motor and to make practical the use of kerosene.

The furniture of the Gem Cafe, which recently went out of business, was attached by Stephens College Endowment Building Company for rent due them from the owners of the cafe. The case was compromised before trial.
